Pledge Allegiance to the Hag

Eric Church

There's a little dive on a dead-end road Called the Cross-Eyed Cricket Waterin' Hole Where you can hear the sound of a steel guitar An' get loud, an' rowdy on PBRBut at the top of every hour Man, you can hear a pin drop As ol' Jack drops a quarter An' plays Merle on that jukebox, an' we stopAn' tip our hats, an' raise our glasses of cold, cold beer They say, country's fadin' but we're still wavin' that flag 'round here When it's time to go, you know you're welcome back Where the people pledge allegiance to the HagWhen the weekend comes an' the weather's clear There's a high spot fifteen miles from here Where you can always find a few dusty trucks With the windows down an' the radio up We sit there poppin' tops Shootin' bull an' singin' songs But you can bet your boots That when Haggard comes onWe tip our hats an' raise our glasses of cold, cold beer They say, country's fadin' but we're still wavin' that flag 'round here When it's time to go, you know you're welcome back Where the people pledge allegiance to the HagOne of these days when my time has come You can take me back to where I'm from An' put me on a westbound train An' ship me off in the pourin' rainDon't cry for me when I'm gone Just put a quarter in the jukebox An' sing me back home An' tip our hats, an' raise your glasses of cold, cold beer They say, country's fadin' but just keep wavin' that flag 'round here An' I know, it'll keep on comin' back long as people pledge allegiance Where folks still pledge allegiance, I pledge allegiance to the Hag Song Discussions is protected by U.S. Patent 9401941. Other patents pending.

Lyrics provided by http://www.1songlyrics.com/