The Home We Made, Pt. II (feat. Dylan Owens)

Crywolf

Don't stand again Don't stand again

And I thought maybe we could save ourselves

And I thought maybe we could save ourselvesI hear your footsteps in the hallway

Your presence won't leave this place

This house has worlds inside it's walls

In the back room, on the last night

I heard you crying for life

The smoke was pouring through the halls

And I thought maybe we could save ourselves

This house has worlds inside it's walls

And I thought maybe we could save ourselves

The smoke was pouring through the halls

And I thought maybe we could save ourselves

But they shot us downAnd I thought maybe we could save ourselves

Don't stand againThey're coming up slow

We're falling quickly

Your hand's in mine, but it's slipping day by day

Love, there is violence in this fall

I hear your whispers fading further

You touch my hand,

You see how all my broken pieces are painted on the wall

And I thought maybe we could save ourselves

This house has worlds inside it's walls

And I thought maybe we could save ourselves

The smoke was pouring through the halls

And I thought maybe we could save ourselves

But they shot us down

They shot us down
