

Treading On Heels

Avail

what you are i'm not your apprentice don't lead the way i could care less of your identity my first impressions did not impress your insecurities come across as confidence it seems convenient to let others think for you when you're tired and you're down can you find somewhere to be that you call your own? try and learn about yourself then we can have revolution my first impressions did not impress your insecurities come across as confidence could it be a front concealment for acceptance so far you've show me little to believe so far have you seen what you expected to see
