Scars

Colton Dixon

Defeated, wasted, broken, bruised
All because of my addictions
It left me crying and confused
It cuts right through my religion
My good intentionsDisregarded, overlooked
Sinking lower and lower
The shame erased my name and took
My face and made it like the others
Would I recover?There's another day
To learn from our mistakes
Knowing that we're not forsaken
They give life to where we've been
When we fall and start again
Scars remind us who we are
Self indulgent, death by cry pride
Forgetting all that I've been given
But still You never left my side
Brought back to life, You healed the broken
With arms wide openThere's another day
To learn from our mistakes
Knowing that we're not forsaken
They give life to where we've been
When we fall and start again
Scars remind us who we areI'm aching, I'm breaking
Lord I'm suffocating oh
Lord wake me and save me
Use the abused me
Take me and fill me up
Today's another day
Forgiven of mistakes
Knowing that we're not forsaken
They give life to where we've been
When we fall and start again
Your scars remind us who we areThere's another day
To learn from my mistakes
Knowing that we're not forsaken
They give life to where we've been
When we fall and start again
Scars remind us who we Remind us who we are

Song Discussions is protected by U.S. Patent 9401941. Other patents pending.

Lyrics provided by http://www.1songlyrics.com/