

And I'll Tell You for Why

This Town Needs Guns

So summer's here again
and like children,
we run around these streets at night to find both solace and confusion. Too late to try our conscience clear.
Hold on to tight.
Our hair crimson in,
the street light,
sunlight glow. Never forget what we shared
'cos promises were never enough for us.
So here's to romance
and hot summer nights.
Walking through tall grass, there's safety in here
tonight we lay down and watch the stars collide.
